1 escape every 10 days probed

► Two patients leaving Alberta Hospital in last month prompts investigation: AHS ► Families, external experts to be part of team

Alberta Health Services has admitted security breaches at Edmonton's Alberta Hospital have not been limited to two very publicized escapes from the psychiatric facility this month.

In fact, the rate of patients evading the facility is one every 10 days, chief operating officer and executive vice-president of AHS, Chris Mazurkewich, said Thursday.

He said a provincewide review will start in August to "reduce the risk of patients leaving mental health without the consent of their psychiatrist," especially at Alberta Hospital.

It will cover the past three years.

Last Tuesday around 4:30 p.m., Douglas Campbell, 32, scaled a fence while playing basketball under supervision at Alberta Hospital.

That fence is part of the problem, said Mazurkewich, and will be covered in the review.

"We don't want a prison, this isn't a prison environment. ... We are looking at designing the fence in a way that it's not scalable," said Mazurkewich.

Melissa Ekkelenkamp is still missing and her family continues to search after the 44-year-old walked away from Alberta Hospital July 6.

Her sister, Arlene Vandekamp, said she believed Ekkelenkamp would be checked every 15 minutes.

Patients' families will be part of the review efforts, but AHS would not say how they will be chosen.

Cathy Pryce, AHS vice-president of addictions and mental-health prevention, said any new procedures resulting from the probe will have to bridge patient rights and security. ● SHELLEY WILLIAMSON

Hospital review

- Experts from Canada and the U.S. will conduct the review, according to AHS, after which findings and recommendations will be made public, likely in a few months.
- Short- and long-term improvements to security, procedures and policies at all Alberta hospitals will be covered in the review.
- Hospital staffing levels, policies, practices, physical environment, and the needs and concerns of patients and their families at all mental-health facilities will be part of the probe.

► Staff Sgt. Ken Henderson, of the EPS child-protection section, speaks to reporters Thursday about the alleged sexual assault of a 10-year-old boy.

Delivery driver comes to rescue of 10-year-old

► Driver heard screams while making delivery at library, chased suspect for blocks ► Man thanked for his actions, will likely be publicly recognized

@METRONEWS.CA

The quick thinking of a delivery driver is being credited for interrupting an alleged sexual assault on a 10-year-old boy.

Police said Thursday that the boy who stepped off an Edmonton Transit bus near Riverbend Square around noon on Tuesday was followed by a 24-year-old man, grabbed by the arm and led behind the Edmonton Public Library, where he was sexually assaulted.

"(The assailant) had asked the child to partially undress and proceeded to take photos of the child with his BlackBerry," said Staff Sgt. Ken Henderson of the EPS child-protection section.

The boy then saw the delivery truck pull up and called for help. The suspect fled, but the driver chased him for three blocks and wrestled him to the ground while another citizen called police.

"We don't encourage people to (get involved)," said Henderson. "Bottom line, it was a really good catch and we're very appreciative of the actions he took at the time."

Henderson said paperwork has been filed to publicly recognize the man for his actions.

Darryl Magloire Grandjambe, of Edmonton, is charged with kidnapping, sexual interference and sexual assault.

Suspect

- Police have a warrant to search Darryl Magloire Grandjambe's cellphone and Henderson said depending on the contents, further charges may follow.
- Police have had "minimal contact" with Grandjambe in the past, said Henderson.
- Other police agencies have been notified of the incident and arrest, as Grandjambe is "quite transient," said Henderson.

No change to auto insurance rates

Albertans will pay the same premiums this year as they did last for mandatory automobile insurance, according to the Automobile Insurance Rate Board.

"Alberta consumers continue to have access to fair and affordable auto insurance," said Alfred Savage, AIRB chair, in a release. "Since the introduction of auto insurance reforms in 2004, premiums for mandatory auto insurance coverage have decreased by 23 per cent."

This rate applies only to mandatory coverage and does not include optional collision or comprehensive coverage, which are set by individual insurance companies. ● METRO

Equipment blamed in fighter jet crash

Investigators say a problem with night-vision goggle equipment was behind the crash last fall of a CF-18 fighter jet in northeastern Alberta.

The pilot safely ejected from the plane before it went down on Nov. 17, 2010, near Canadian Forces Base Cold Lake. An initial report into the crash by the military says the pilot was using night-vision goggles on a mission and became disoriented when trying to land. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Historic Edmonton streetcar back on track after restoration

It took 17 years, 35,000 volunteer hours and $151,000, but Streetcar No. 33 has been restored to its 1912 glory and is back on the High Level Bridge Streetcar Line.

"This is the first time we've had a genuine Edmonton streetcar," said Hans Ryffel, president of the Edmonton Radial Railway Society, which has been providing service since 1997.

"It's the first time since 1951, since streetcar abandonment in Edmonton."

The car has been in service since roughly the beginning of June, joining the Japanese, Australian and German cars already on the line.

After Edmonton ditched its streetcars, most were stripped of metal and electrical parts and sold as wood for cottages or farm buildings.

► Streetcar No. 33

Streetcar No. 33 was discovered near Wellington, Alta., in 1980. It was in decrepit condition, Ryffel said.

Now it's back on the line daily, with the exception of Tuesdays and Thursdays.

All aboard

- 1 Streetcar service began in Edmonton in 1908. By 1912, there were 10-million rides annually.
- 2 According to Fort Edmonton Park, Edmonton was the first Prairie city with a public streetcar system.
- 3 Streetcar No. 42, another original Edmonton car, was used as a cottage near Sylvan Lake but has been restored as a feature at Fort Edmonton Park.
- 4 Streetcars travel from the Old Strathcona Farmers Market to Jasper Avenue (between 100 Avenue and Jasper Avenue, and 109 Street and 110 Street) and back for $4.

► Clifton Purvis of ASIRT tells reporters Thursday that four RCMP officers have been cleared of wrongdoing in the fatal shooting of an armed man in January.

Mounties cleared in fatal shooting

► Man repeatedly told to put down weapon but 'commenced to raise it toward police': ASIRT

Four Mounties acted in self-defence on Jan. 16 when they shot and killed an armed man near Sherwood Park, investigators with the Alberta Serious Incident Response Team have determined.

Clifton Purvis, executive director of ASIRT, says the "highly agitated" man had a history of depression, was not taking his medication and threatened to kill officers "or be killed" during an eight-hour standoff. "This finding in no way diminishes the tragedy," Purvis said. "On behalf of ASIRT, I offer sympathy and condolences to the friends and the family of the deceased."

Purvis would not name the man, who was 56, but his neighbours have identified him as Murray McCoy. A police negotiator spent more than four hours on the phone with McCoy before he came out of the house with a loaded 12-gauge shotgun and tried to get into an armoured police truck.

He then started walking toward the RCMP command post. At that point, four officers got out of the truck and repeatedly ordered McCoy to put down his gun.

He levelled his weapon and all four officers shot him several times.

You can't get it anywhere else.

That's the sentiment behind food at Capital Ex, which is as much about the corn dogs and cotton candy as it is the rides, games and entertainment.

"There's always a line for the most part," said Laura Sager, assistant manager of the Those Little Donuts booth near the Telus Stage. "We get a lot of two (bags) for $5 or five for $10. You can't get one because you always want more."

Bulk is the way to buy when it comes to deep-fried Oreos, as well.

Basically, any treat you can think of comes deep fried at the elephant ears booth — Mars bars, Oreos, Twinkies and wagon wheels — and you can get six of the deep-fried cookies for $5.

"You'd be surprised how many people want to know, 'What else have you tried deep frying?'" said owner Corrina Fazackerley, who plans to add another deep-fried treat next summer.

LED street bulbs to reduce light pollution

► New streetlights deemed a success after pilot project

Orange light is wasted light.

That's according to Coun. Don Iveson, who happily announced Thursday the city will install 4,500 high-efficiency LED lights in 12 neighbourhoods this year.

They use 40 to 60 per cent less electricity than the current sodium luminaires, and for every 1,000 replaced, greenhouse gases will be reduced by 243 tonnes.

"They're much more efficient converting electricity into light," said Iveson. "It's one of the most efficient things the city can do."

► Coun. Don Iveson holds one of the new high-efficiency LED light fixtures being installed throughout Edmonton as part of the Neighbourhood Renewal program.

Savings will be $4,300 per neighbourhood each year because even though the new lights are more expensive, they last four times as long.

Gord Cebryk, director of signals, street lighting and infrastructure, said white light will make it

- The city has already replaced the lights in West Jasper Place and throughout most of Capilano.
- There are 98,000 streetlights in the City of Edmonton, 60 per cent of which are in neighbourhoods.
- By the end of next year, 20 neighbourhoods will have LED lights, while replacing all will take years.

easier to distinguish colours and features while driving at night, as opposed to the orange glare.

Edmontonians will notice reduced light pollution, said Cebryk, as the LEDs illuminate roads and sidewalks but don't overflow into other areas.

Rainbow spill fixed, company says

The owner of an oil pipeline that caused the second-largest spill in Alberta's history says the problem is fixed and the company has applied to re-open the line.

Plains Midstream Canada has asked the province's Energy Resources Conservation Board for permission to start sending oil down the Rainbow line.

"The ERCB will conduct a thorough assessment of all the materials submitted to the ERCB to determine if the pipeline can be safely returned to operation and operate within all regulatory requirements," board spokesman Darin Barter said Thursday.

"They've actually refused to give them to us," said Garrett Tomlinson of the Lubicon Lake Nation at Little Buffalo.

In an emailed statement, a Plains Midstream spokeswoman said the company had complied with all the board's requests.

"Plains has fully co-operated with the ERCB and other regulatory and government agencies," said Victoria Person.

RCMP ramping up weekend enforcement on the roads

The RCMP and Alberta Sheriffs are cracking down on drunk drivers this weekend.

"It is hoped our efforts will lead to sober and alert driving by all Albertans, not only during August but throughout the year," said RCMP K Division traffic services Supt. Gary Brine.

Alberta Integrated Traffic Units are asking drivers not to get behind the wheel after drinking and to not use a cellphone or text, drive aggressively or drive at unsafe speeds.

Bitter battle to help the hungry

► Troops fight militants blocking vital food supplies

Helping the starving turned lethal in Somalia's capital Thursday.

African Union troops fought house-to-house battles with militants in Mogadishu to clear space for aid groups bringing in food supplies.

Meanwhile, intelligence reports showed insurgents reinforcing for a possible attack on squalid camps of famine refugees.

Heavy fighting erupted on the line of control between the government side and territory held by al-Shabab, Somalia's dominant militant group.

At least six people were killed.

Somalia's reality

► Al-Shabab militants already have killed men who tried to escape the famine with their families, saying it is better to starve than accept help from the West.

► The World Food Program says it cannot reach 2.2-million people in need of aid in the militant-controlled areas in southern Somalia because of insecurity.

cating international efforts to prevent a wave of death.

The al-Qaida-linked al-Shabab has sent 300 reinforcement fighters to Mogadishu in recent days, said Lt.-Col. Paddy Ankun-da, spokesperson for the African Union peacekeeping force.

Ankunda said the AU force believes al-Shabab is trying to prevent aid from reaching the tens of thousands of famine refugees who have arrived in Mogadishu this month.

The devastating famine in the Horn of Africa threatens al-Shabab's hold on areas it controls.

The militants fear the disaster will drive away the people they tax and conscript into military service.

The World Food Program estimates more than 11.3-million people need aid across drought-hit regions in East Africa.

A Winnipeg woman who has worked in the sex trade has been ordered held in jail because of the threat the community faces if she doesn't complete treatment for infectious tuberculosis.

Health officials have won a rare order from the courts under the Public Health Act to keep the 30-year-old locked up in a provincial corrections facility for 90 days.

The woman was diagnosed with "untreated active" TB in late December,

Soldier planned attack: U.S. army

► It's alleged he eyed assault on base where 13 died

An absentee Muslim soldier who had weapons stashed in a motel room near Fort Hood has admitted planning an attack on the iconic Texas post, authorities say.

Thirteen people died at Fort Hood in 2009 in the worst mass shooting ever on a U.S. military installation.

Pfc. Naser Abdo, 21, was arrested Wednesday at a motel about five kilometres from Fort Hood's main gate.

Agents found firearms and "items that could be identified as bomb-making components, including gunpowder," in his motel room, said FBI spokesperson Erik Vasys.

The army said the man arrested by Killeen police "was in possession of a large quantity of ammunition, weapons and a bomb inside a backpack."

Upon questioning, the army said, he admitted to planning an attack on Fort Hood.

Officials have not offered details about Abdo's possible intentions.

The infantry soldier had applied for conscientious-objector status last year, saying his religious beliefs should prohibit his service in any war.

A military review board recommended this spring that he be separated from the army.

But the discharge was delayed after he was charged with possessing child pornography and an Article 32 military hearing last month recommended he be court martialled.

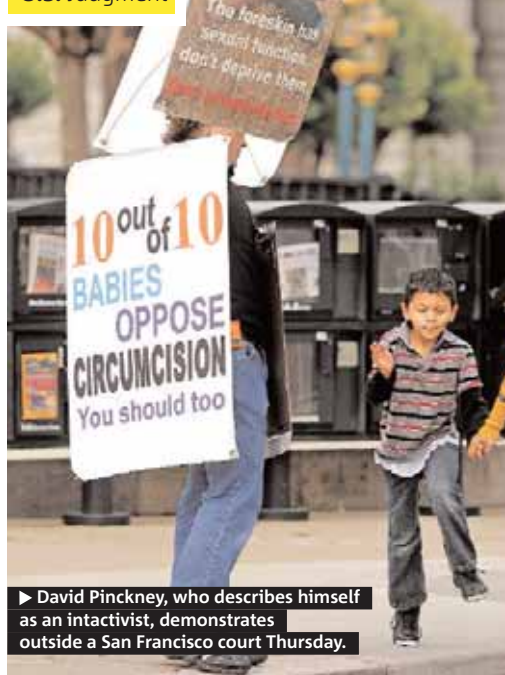

He has been absent without leave from Fort Campbell, Ky., since the July 4 weekend.

Vasys said the FBI would charge Abdo with possessing bomb-making components and he would be transferred from Killeen police into federal custody.

Vasys said there was nothing to indicate Abdo was working with others.

An Oklahoma attorney who has represented Abdo said Thursday he hadn't heard from Abdo in weeks. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A man allegedly punched an American Airlines pilot who kicked him off a flight leaving Miami.

Then the man and his brother attacked the pilot again before bystanders tackled the brothers in the terminal, officials said.

Jonathan and Luis Baez, both of Puerto Rico, were arrested at Miami International Airport.

They had been aboard Flight 1755 bound for San Francisco.

As the plane taxied away from the gate, a flight attendant noticed Jonathan Baez, 27, was sleeping and had not buckled his seat belt. She tried to wake him, but she told police Baez appeared to be intoxicated or on drugs.

The pilot turned the plane around.

► Norway attacks may be isolated, but European officials worry they will inspire other extremists

Norway cast it as the isolated act of a lone-wolf terrorist, whose boasts of a far-flung network of anti-Muslim warriors were the fantasies of a deranged mind.

European officials at an emergency counter-terror meeting see a continent-wide threat from right-wing extremists amid mounting Islamophobia — and warn of possible copycats.

Two visions of the Norway atrocity emerged Thursday, as Europe gropes for answers following a tragedy that claimed the lives of 78 people.

While a picture emerged of a solitary killer, the attack carried out by Anders Behring Breivik has stirred questions in Europe about whether authorities have neglected the threat of right-wing extremists in their push to crack down on Islamist terror groups after 9-11.

At an emergency meeting on the far-right threat, European Union counterterrorism officials warned radicals who share Breivik's ideology might be tempted to follow his lead.

U.S. officials: Iran in cahoots with al-Qaida

► Country's most serious allegation to date of Iranian aid to terrorist group

Families of jailed hikers remain hopeful

The families of two Americans imprisoned in Iran for nearly two years say they're counting on a court hearing Sunday to end their ordeal at last.

Shane Bauer and Josh Fattal, both 29, are due for what Iranian authorities have said will be a final hearing in their protracted espionage case. It's scheduled two years to the day after they were arrested along with another American, Sarah Shourd, during a hike on the Iraq-Iran border. Shourd was released last September.

Tehran's chief prosecutor, Abbas Jafari Dowlatabadi, told Iran's official news agency in June that officials "are hopeful that the final decision about the three Americans' case will be taken" at Sunday's hearing. He did not hint at what the decision might be. But the families, who have long maintained the hikers' innocence, took his comments as a good sign that their ordeal will soon be over.

"I am more than eager to see Josh and Shane come home," said Josh's mother, Laura Fattal, of Pennsylvania. She said she sees the hearing date — the second anniversary of their arrest — as a good sign.

The families have been working to make sure Iranian authorities know the rest of the world is watching.

They've elicited statements of support from President Barack Obama, Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, Nobel Peace Prize winner Archbishop Desmond Tutu, and well-known Muslims such as former boxing champion Muhammad Ali.

Shourd, Laura Fattal and Josh's brother, Alex Fattal, planned a rally in New York on Friday outside the Iranian mission to the United Nations.

Shourd, Bauer and Fattal, friends from their student days at the University of California-Berkeley, were vacationing in Iraqi Kurdistan when they went hiking near a scenic waterfall. Shourd told the New York Times last November that they stepped off an unmarked dirt road, inadvertently crossing from Iraq into Iran only because a border guard of unknown nationality gestured for them to approach.

She said they had no idea they were so close to the border. They all deny any espionage.

Shourd, now 32, and Bauer got engaged in prison before she was released for humanitarian grounds following health issues.

"As soon as Shane gets out, we're getting married," she said. "It's been a long time coming."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Obama administration accused Iran on Thursday of entering into a "secret deal" with an al-Qaida offshoot that provides money and recruits for attacks in Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The Treasury Department designated six members of the unit as terrorists subject to U.S. sanctions.

The U.S. intelligence community has in the past disagreed about the extent of direct links between the Iranian government and al-Qaida.

Thursday's allegations went further than what most analysts had previously said was a murky relationship with limited co-operation.

David S. Cohen, Treasury's point man for terrorism and financial intelligence, said Iran entered into a "secret deal with al-Qaida, allowing it to funnel funds and operatives through its territory."

He didn't provide any details of that agreement, but said the sanctions seek to disrupt al-Qaida's work in Iraq and deny the terrorist group's leadership much-needed support. "Iran is the leading state sponsor of terrorism in the world today," Cohen said in a statement. "We are illuminating yet another aspect of Iran's unmatched support for terrorism."

The sanctions block any assets the individuals might have held in the United States, and bans Americans from doing any business with them.

JOB LOSS

Factory workers raise a stink

Workers at a diaper factory in France are raising a stink about management's plans to close the plant — in the process, sending a creative plea for help to France's pregnant first lady.

Employees at the Ontex factory in Villefranche-sur-Saône have sent 187 diapers to Carla Bruni-Sarkozy, the wife of French President Nicolas Sarkozy. That's one diaper for each employee in the plant, and a none-too-subtle message that while the diapers might be disposable, their jobs aren't.

Union leader Bernard Leblond said workers had "stuck a bright yellow sticker" saying "made in France by the 187 workers of Ontex" on the box containing the diapers and sent it to Fort Bregançon — the mansion where supermodel-turned-singer Bruni-Sarkozy is spending her summer vacation.

► Isaiah Mustafa, a.k.a. the Old Spice Guy, wins out over Fabio in 'Mano a Mano en El Bano' contest

The Old Spice Guy has won his hunk-off with Fabio.

Former football player Isaiah Mustafa has been lead spokesman for the Procter & Gamble Co. brand of men's body washes and deodorants for nearly two years, starting in a popular series of marketing campaigns relying heavily on YouTube, Twitter and other social media.

Now, he has held off a playful effort by the Italian model to become "the new Old Spice Guy."

In a series of videos culminating Thursday, the muscular pitchmen duelled in tongue-in-cheek challenges from one another and viewers. They held staring and whistling contests, bantered, and gave advice on writing love letters and working out.

P&G says Mustafa won based on consumer feedback such as "likes" and online comments.

They called the competition "Mano a Mano en El Bano" (hand-to-hand in the bathroom).

Mustafa said he wasn't worried, even though Fabio has been "the epitome of the sex symbol as a pitchman."

"Not at all," he told The Associated Press. "There are so many fans that enjoy the Old Spice Guy, there's not really a calling for him to disappear."

A PARTICLE OF HOPE AMID TRAGEDY

THE METRO LIST

PAUL SULLIVAN
METRO

It's hard to believe all this happened in just one week. Whatever happened to the "silly season"?

- 1 Tragedy in Norway. A lunatic murders dozens of innocent young people to make some kind of stupid point. What could be more horrifying and pointless? Lesson No. 1: Disarm all the Nazis. Carefully.
- 2 The 27 Club. A different kind of tragedy as Amy Winehouse joins a self-destructive fraternity of young people who make beautiful music but can't face the music. Good news/bad news: She left behind a partially completed album, so she'll haunt the Billboard 100 for some time to come.

- 3 Jack Layton. Let's hope Canada's favourite champagne socialist gets an opportunity to raise a glass in celebration at least one more time.

- 4 The God Particle. God may or may not exist, but there is new evidence that the God Particle does. Deep in the bowels of the CERN atom smasher in Switzerland, the enigmatic Higgs Boson, which theoretically imparts mass to all other elemental particles, leaves tantalizing tracks in the virtual sand. Go ahead Neo, take the red pill.

- 5 Peace-making Pakistani. Remember this name: Hina Rabbani Khar, the best-looking foreign minister on the planet, and the youngest. At 34, Pakistan's foreign minister has just finished a visit to arch-enemy India, where she charmed the dickens out of her Indian counterpart, S.M. Kirshna, 79. The two nations promise "a new era" of co-operation. She's not just another pretty face.

- 6 Speaking of pretty faces. Hugh Hefner's 25-year-old ex-fiancée, Crystal Harris, tells Howard Stern she only had sex once with the octogenarian Big Bunny and it only lasted "like two seconds." I bet it was the best two seconds of Hef's long, long life.

- 7 The famine in Somalia. Let me get this straight. There are two million people in Somalia on the brink of starvation, and the faction in charge of the blighted area, al-Shabab, believes it will be better for the people to starve to death than accept aid from western infidel dogs. Just for a second there, thanks to Hina Rabbani Khar, the world was starting to make sense. Now, thanks to al-Shabab, it's back to normal.

- 8 The cod's back, 'by. Break out the Screech because there's cause for joy on the Grand Banks, as for the first time since the fishery shut down in 2003, the cod are starting to come back — one third of their levels from the '70s and '80s, and growing. Not yet time to rebuild the boat, 'by, but close.

Worth mentioning

GLOBAL WARMING. A wildlife biologist whose observation that polar bears likely drowned in the Arctic helped galvanize the global warming movement seven years ago was placed on administrative leave as officials investigate scientific misconduct allegations.

Although it wasn't clear what the exact allegations are, a government watchdog group representing Anchorage-based scientist Charles Monnett said investigators have focused on his 2006 journal article about the bears that garnered worldwide attention.

Whatever the outcome or the nature of the allegations, the investigation will likely fuel the ongoing fight between climate change activists and those who are skeptical of scientists' findings about global warming. The probe also focuses attention on an Obama administration policy intended to protect scientists from political interference.

In May 2008, the polar bear was classified as a threatened species, the first with its survival at risk due to global warming.

Fugitive who said 'catch me if you can' caught

A fugitive who taunted police on his Facebook page to 'catch me if you can. I'm in Brooklyn' has been arrested.

The Daily News says U.S. marshals and NYPD detectives tracked Victor Burgos down to an apartment in Brooklyn's Bedford-

Stuyvesant neighbourhood Monday night, sitting at a computer with his Facebook page open.

The 29-year-old suspect was wanted by police in Utica, N.Y., on multiple arrest warrants for domestic violence and harassment of his former girlfriend.

He allegedly issued the Facebook challenge after his mug shot appeared on the Utica Police Department's 10 most-wanted list.

Plot synopsis

When nearly divorced Cal Weaver (Steve Carell) begins hanging around a trendy LA bar he meets Jacob (Ryan Gosling), a handsome slick talker who offers to tutor him in the art of being single. Intwoven are two other love stories — the trials of Cal's son (Jonah Bobo) who thinks his babysitter (Analeigh Tipton) is his soul mate and Hannah's (Emma Stone) search for the right guy.

Gosling gets funny

► Canadian actor, best known for turns in darker roles, shines in Crazy, Stupid Love ► Breezy rom com has substance beneath the sweetness

Richard: As good as Steve Carell is here I have a feeling the person everyone will be talking about on the way out of the theatre is Ryan Gosling. He reveals a gift for comedy, a magnificent abdominal area and the ability to take a stereotype and turn it into a living, breathing character. Agree or no?

MB: Yes, this is a great leap forward for an actor who has played a variety of depressives, mumbler, and addicts. He looks great in a sharp cut jacket and crackles with charisma. Of course, he's got the fun role, but still, he adds something extra to the stock character of the lothario with a wounded heart. And by the way the female members of the audience swooned when he took off his shirt. Gosling has matured into one fine Canada Goose.

RC: It's true. Young Hercules seems like a long time ago now. If Gosling can erase his slightly embarrassing TV past away, then I think this is the movie that will go a long way to erase the image of Steve Carell as that guy from The Office. He was masterful on that show and has been good in other movies — particularly as the depressed Uncle Frank in Little Miss Sunshine — but here he absolutely nails the mix of comedy and pathos needed to make Crazy, Stupid, Love so memorable.

MB: Right, but I couldn't help notice your lack of praise for his recent film work, which I find tepid and tweezy. Here Carell can get his chops into a script that goes beyond his usual hangdog schlemiels and grow a pair. And it's a joy to watch. But Richard, let's not leave out the perfectly cast supporting roles. I loved both the babysitter and Carell's 13-year-old son. Any other standouts for you? Or can we give the directing team their kudos? I've rarely seen better direction in a rom com.

RC: I agree all round. It's a cut above the usual rom

com, reminding me more of the Neil Simon relationship movies of the '70s that were family dramas disguised as sex comedies. As for the supporting cast, I have to say I called it for Emma Stone when I first saw her in Superbad.

MB: By the way, I wasn't sure about the movie at first. The plot seemed to be too close to something Dane Cook might have done in his brief heyday, but then it ripened into a full-fledged, perfect farce with all the plot strands coming together. The ending's a bit sentimental, and I've always hated when characters express their feelings in a Big Speech, but these are tiny quibbles.

Cowboys and Aliens*Genre: Action, Sci-FiDirector: Jon FavreauStars: Daniel Craig, Harrison Ford and Olivia Wilde

What's really stupefying about Jon Favreau's genre mash-up Cowboys and Aliens is that none of its five credited screenwriters notices how clunky, artless and just plain awful most of the dialogue sounds.

The cowboys spend so much of the film sitting around talking and whining that you find yourself rooting for the aliens — and wishing they'd show up sooner.

The real shame, though, is the wasted pedigree at every level, from a skilled genre director (Favreau) to blockbuster godfathers as producers (Steven Spielberg and Ron Howard) to a dream cast (Harrison Ford, Daniel Craig, Olivia Wilde and Sam Rockwell).

That so many great elements can add up to so little makes you wonder where it all went so terribly, terribly wrong.

It becomes clear about midway through the climactic battle scene in The Smurfs that the adorable blue characters are pretty much just using their namesake favourite word in place of cursing.

And thinking too much about the implications of the plot will only lead to migraines. Neal Patrick Harris and Glee scene-stealer Jayma Mays do their best, but the stunt-roles) grates.

Spoiler alert: The obvious and awful joke — "I smurfed a girl and I liked it" appears — and doesn't even make sense, since there's only one girl Smurf. Despite being beloved kids' entertainment, the film is targeted at the 25 to 40 crowd. Whose smurfing idea was that? ● NED EHRBAR

Emphasis on the R-rating

► Body-switching movies have been done before ► But Change-Up stars Ryan Reynolds and Jason Bateman say where their film differs is the rating

MWN IN HOLLYWOOD

Playing best friends who magically switch bodies in The Change-Up, real-life friends Ryan Reynolds and Jason Bateman have had plenty of time to think about what they'd do if they found themselves in that situation in real life.

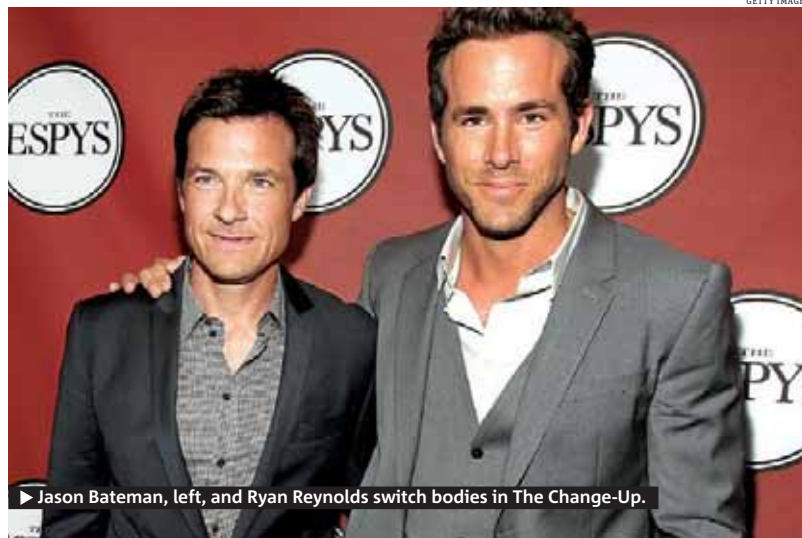

"I'd do terrible things to his body," Reynolds admits.

Bateman, not batting an eye, finishes the thought for him: "And to my wife. He's been after my wife for years," to which Reynolds nods solemnly, adding, "Years, years. And she will be mine."

Kidding — we hope — aside, the two friends were excited enough about the idea to work off of each other's quirks.

In the film, Bateman's straight-laced family man finds himself navigating the world of a layabout bachelor, while Reynolds' barely employed actor takes on a wife and kids and a rough week at work as a lawyer.

But while they may seem perfect for their roles — Bateman as the straight-laced family man and Reynolds as the pot-smoking ladies man — the guys insist they didn't really mind who played which role. In fact, Reynolds doesn't think he's any more like one character than the other.

"When you buy a ticket to an R-rated film, you want R-rated comedy."

JASON BATEMAN

"I've got to say I'm somewhere in the middle," he says.

"There was a time in my life when I'd wake up mornings in a shallow pool of my own fluid, but those days are over. I eat breakfast now, not ketchup. It's different now."

Bateman, though, definitely related to the husband and father he plays on screen, even if he was concerned it might not fit with the kind of raunchy comedy they were going for.

"You look at the domestic part of this film and you think is that going to soften the R-rating?" he admits.

"Because when you buy a ticket to an R-rated film, you want R-rated comedy."

The Change-Up is most definitely an R-rated comedy, and the two actors are more than proud of it.

"You want to go in there, have a good time, laugh your ass off, maybe get offended a couple of times and get the hell out. We're not trying to win Oscars here or teach anybody any lessons," Bateman says.

"There's no reason to do another body-switching movie unless you're going to do something different. And we do here. This is an R-rated body-switching movie, that hasn't been done before."

Reynolds is right there with him, as he says he definitely prefers R-rated material.

"Every PG-13 comedy I've ever done, you always have that inevitable moment halfway through shooting when you call the studio head and go, 'Are you sure we can't go R with this? Because we just shot something terrible,'" he says.

"But there are sometimes when you're in a PG-13 movie when it doesn't need to be rated R. It's very easy to fall back on the idea that you can swear your way out of a scene. But it's nice when you can let it all hang out in a movie like this and not worry too much about pushing it too far."

Films' primate attraction

► Ape-centric films show humans love our not-so-distant cousins

Movies have been messing with apes since a Hollywood director captured and chained that great gorilla on Skull Island and brought him to Broadway in 1933's King Kong.

The reason, of course, is as plain as the image in the mirror.

Apes and monkeys: They're like us, but they're not us. That's the fascination. And it's a great starting point for all kinds of storytelling.

This summer, movies have offered a barrel of monkeys that, at the risk of offending Bonzo and Mighty Joe Young, eclipses all previous comers, not to mention the robots, pirates and wizards currently littering the multiplex.

Monkeys and apes are everywhere, from Crystal, the crazy capuchin seen in The Hangover II to the bro-mance between Kevin James and the Nick Nolte-voiced silverback gorilla in Zookeeper.

Then there's this story of human hubris: Scientists perform experiments on a young chimp and, afterward, abandon it, leaving the animal caught halfway between man and monkey.

It's the premise of not one, but two summer movies: the upcoming reboot Rise of the Planet of the Apes and the Sundance Film Festival documentary sensation, Project Nim, which chronicles a Columbia University professor's radical attempt in the 1970s to teach a chim-

- ▶ America's most dysfunctional family has been entertaining us since 1989
- ▶ Series executive producer Al Jean tells us what's next for Homer and co.

METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

Sick of The Simpsons? Impossible, we say!

The series is set to hit 500 episodes on Feb. 19, 2012, after all.

But according to series executive producer Al Jean, not everyone is feeling the love.

"There's a big town meeting that the Simpsons don't know about, and when they go in, the town is saying, 'We're going to get rid of the Simpsons,'" Jean said Tuesday, explaining the milestone episode's plot to TV critics touring the show's animation studio, Film Roman, in Burbank, Calif.

"They're sick of them."

Highlights

For fans still on Team Simpson, Jean spilled other highlights of Season 23, premiering Sept. 25.

- The Treehouse of Horrors episode will actually air around Halloween this year: Oct. 30.

- Another holiday-themed half-hour — a Christmas episode — takes place 30 years in the future.

"Bart is this lousy, dead-beat dad who actually lives in the school, which is now condos, and Skinner is his landlord," Jean says.

In another episode, Homer becomes a Glenn Beck-like pundit.

He leads the Gravy Boat movement and selects Ted Nugent as his ideal presidential candidate. The Nuge guest stars — and sings!

- Pop-culture spoofs and homages abound.

In a parody of Inception, Jean says: "One dream level was (drawn in) the Tracey Ullman Show style" — like the animated series' early days.

Sia's sagely approach

► Aussie singer-songwriter talks about her destiny ► Explains how a death inspired her song Breathe Me

SCENE@METRONews.CA

It seems that we are born and then spend the rest of our lives finding out who we are. At least Sia, the über-bubbly Australian pop singer-songwriter, would agree with that statement.

"I know, isn't it crazy," the 35-year-old rhetorically gushes.

Sia's latest album, We

Are Born, discusses this mortal coil in passionate funk, soul and ballads. Not that she presumes to offer easy explanations, but her lyrics seem to possess a certain sagely grasp of life beyond the commercial schlep.

"We're all created by our environment when we're growing up," she says. "I don't think I was born this way, I think I was created. I've been tap dancing all my life." She pauses for a long moment.

Does she mean literally or metaphorically?

"Literally, jazz tap dancing. Metaphorically, too, I guess. I'm a terrible real tap dancer, but I'm a fantastic metaphorical tap dancer."

Sia was tapping along quite nicely at the beginning of this millennium, living in London with the usual ups and downs. Then her boyfriend's death shook her so hard that she wrote the beautiful, heart-stopping Breathe Me, which, when paired with the finale of HBO's series Six Feet Under, blew up her career.

"I'd be in a very different place had they not put

Wandering

Sia's wanderlust has led to her keeping apartments in New York, London and Adelaide, Australia.

► Quote: "My dream when I was a kid was to have a place in every major city. That is not my dream anymore. My dream is to decide where to have a place and throw all my stuff there. That old adage 'you don't own it, it owns you' is true to some degree. Now I do not need this life I thought I wanted. I thought I wanted Elton John's life or something."

that song in there. I'd probably be a reiki master or a dog masseuse," she sighs. "A beast was born."

Bringing the house down

► Adele, Chris Brown and Lil Wayne announced as the first performers at this year's MTV Video Music Awards

Chris Brown and Lil Wayne are returning to the MTV Video Music Awards stage, while Adele will make her first appearance.

The trio are the first performers announced for the Aug. 28 ceremony in Los Angeles, at the Nokia Theatre. The announcement was made Thursday.

Brown's star, once tarnished because of his attack on Rihanna, is shining bright this year, and MTV has taken note.

"He is having a moment with multiple hits this year, and he always delivers on the VMA stage," said Amy Doyle, executive vice-president of music and talent at MTV, on Wednesday.

She called his 2007 performance at the VMAs one of the most memorable.

"He will give an energetic, bombastic, jaw-dropping performance."

Adele, who is nominated for seven VMAs, is also scheduled to perform. Only Katy Perry has more VMA nods with nine; Adele is tied with Kanye West with her seven.

Doyle predicted Adele would "bring chills down everybody's spine, if not bring them to tears, too."

Adele has the year's bestselling album with 21, but Doyle notes that her live act hasn't been seen much: Adele was forced to reschedule some concerts earlier this year because of a throat problem.

Lil Wayne's appearance will come a day before the scheduled release of his much-anticipated new album, Tha Carter IV. Like Brown, he has also performed before on the VMAs.

"Being a nominee and performer on the VMAs once again is an honour because everyone doesn't get that opportunity," he said in statement. "Looking forward to performing on the show, and having Tha Carter IV drop the same week!"

Doyle said this year's show has a dynamic set that will "allow for a lot of bells and whistles," and promises that each performance will be unique.

So far, no host has been announced for the typical-

WHAT HAPPENED TO THAT HIT SUMMER SONG?

SOUND CHECK

ALAN CROSS
SCENE
@METRONEWS.CA

It used to be every summer had its song.

No matter where you went, you heard That Song. It spilled from cars, slipped out from underneath ear buds, blared in clubs and floated through stores. And you could never, ever turn on a radio without hearing it.

Last year's song of the summer was California Gurls by Katy Perry. Remember 2009 when Use Somebody from Kings of Leon was played every-where? I fully intended to write about candidates for the summer song of 2011, but then I ran into a wall. What, pray tell, determines a "hit song" these days?

In the old days, a hit song was the one you heard on the radio the most. Its radio hit-ness factor was determined by (a) how many copies the single sold; and (b) how many radio stations were playing it. At some point over the summer, one song would be played so much that it became indelibly associated with your memories of that year.

If we're to use that standard for the summer of 2011, the current leader is Adele's Rolling in the Deep. No song is being played more often on more radio stations in North America right now.

Today, though, hit songs are determined by more than those two parameters. This is because an increasing number of people now get their music from places other than the radio.

A service called The Ultimate Chart (which monitors everything from plays on YouTube to tweets on Twitter) ranks LMFAO's Party Rock Anthem as the most popular song of the summer of 2011. At number two, it's Skyscraper by Demi Lovato, a song that has had barely any radio airplay at all so far. She's a total online phenom right now. Adele is way down at number eight.

And let's not forget Rebecca Black's Friday. As awful as the song is, the video has been viewed 170 million times on YouTube and parodied millions of times more, all without ever troubling even the lowest regions of the Top 40 radio charts. That's a hit, right?

So what will be the summer hit of 2011? I guess it all depend on where you get your music.

Military courts celebrities

Scarlett Johansson is the latest celebrity to catch the eye of the military, as Sgt. Dustin L. Williams has invited the actress to the Marine Corps Ball.

Sadly, though, the Avengers star will be too busy with work to attend.

"I feel incredibly honoured to have been invited to the Marine Corps Ball," Johansson says in a statement to Zap2It.

"Sgt. Williams, unfortunately due to prior commitments, I will not be able to attend the Ball with you this year but I am sending you a case of Moët and Chandon with gratitude."

Mila Kunis and Justin Timberlake have already accepted invitations while Betty White has politely declined to attend and Miley Cyrus has not yet responded.

The Marine Corps Ball will be held Nov. 10.

Sobering up cold turkey killed Amy Winehouse: Dad

Amy Winehouse's family are now suggesting that the troubled singer's death was actually caused by trying to get sober after years of heavy drinking, according to the Sun.

Her father, Mitch Winehouse, reportedly says it was the shock to her system of going cold turkey that did her in.

"He said doctors had told Amy to gradually reduce her intake of alcohol and to avoid bingeing at all costs. Amy told him she couldn't do that. It was all or nothing and she gave up completely," a source says.

"Mitch said the shock of giving up, after everything she had been through over a bad few years, was just too much for her to take."

Tim Gunn has a go at Hillary

'CONFUSED ABOUT HER GENDER'. Tim Gunn doesn't mince words when it comes to the fashion sense of Secretary of State Hillary Clinton. "Why must she dress that way?" the Project Runway mentor tells George Lopez. "I think she's confused about her gender [with] all these big, baggy menswear tailored pantsuits."

But Gunn still appreciates Clinton's work.

"I have great respect for her intellect and her tenacity and for what she does for our country in her governmental role," he says. "I just wish she could send a stronger message about American fashion."

Sweet summer sodas

► Think pop can only be purchased? ► Homemade Soda by Andrew Schloss boasts recipes for floats, fizzy juices, sparkling teas & much more

These over-the-top sophisticated sundaes may look fancy but are easy to make. You start by making walnut praline. The praline is broken into pieces and scattered over scoops of ice cream glazed with root beer syrup. The sundae is crowned with a peak of whipped cream and candied orange peel.

Root Beet Praline Sundaes

Preparation:

- 1 Preheat oven to 400°F. Then scatter walnuts in single layer on sheet pan and toast in oven for 10 minutes, until aromatic and lightly browned.
- 2 Heat sugar in nonstick skillet over medium-high heat, stirring occasionally with wooden spoon, until sugar begins to melt and lump. Add 2 tablespoons of root beer syrup. Mix will start to foam. Stir constantly; sugar will become thinner and lumps will melt. When almost all lumps are gone, remove from heat and stir in butter and baking soda. Liquid will become foamy. Stir until foam is no longer streaky, about 10 seconds. Mix in toasted walnuts and pour mix back onto sheet pan, scraping as much of the melted sugar possible with stirring spoon. Allow to set until firm. Torque pan and sheet of caramelized nuts will pop off. Chop into small pieces.

- 3 To make sundaes, put scoop of ice cream in 4 dessert dishes. Drizzle remaining root beer syrup over top, and top with a generous sprinkle of caramelized walnuts. Top each with a dollop of whipped cream and a spoonful of candied orange peel. Serve.

A toast to Bloody Mary

Paris is a drinkers' Disneyland with a cool bar, café or brasserie on almost every corner.

I spent time there recently and worked my way to rue Daunou, to pay respects to Harry's New York Bar: A liquid landmark since 1911.

Some visit because Ernest Hemingway hung out there. I made the pilgrimage to taste its Bloody Mary.

If the history of that classic cocktail has one consistency it's that it was invented at Harry's in the early 1930s. Some say it was named after a girl the original bartender knew from a joint called the Bucket of Blood Club in Chicago. Others say England's Queen Mary I was the inspiration.

You can find dozens of Bloody Mary recipes online that suggest any number of different vodkas to use as a base.

While Harry's chooses a Polish version; I like keeping things Canadian and mix mine with Iceberg Vodka (750 ml, $23.59 - $26.98) — a super smooth, full-flavoured spirit made with melted iceberg chunks harvested off the coast of Newfoundland. # All in or fold? MLB teams must decide

► Trade deadline weekend should reveal which teams are serious about making a run at the 2011 World Series, and which have written off the season

► The Texas Rangers saw what a big deal can do last year when they got Cliff Lee from Seattle and rode him to the World Series.

The Major League Baseball trade deadline is fast approaching, and plenty of big names have already moved.

Carlos Beltran is headed to San Francisco, bolstering the reigning world champions for another run at the title, and Colby Rasmus is out of Tony La Russa's doghouse in St. Louis and batting in the Rogers Centre.

With the deadline looming Sunday, there are still a lot of big decisions to be made and big stars who could be getting changes of scenery.

The New York Yankees are in second place in the AL East, three games behind Boston, which almost assuredly means they will be active. The Yankees could be in the market for a quality starter with Phil Hughes struggling and a left-handed reliever.

"If we make moves, we feel that it's to better the club," Yankees manager Joe Girardi said. "Will we tweak it? I don't know.

Market watch

Ubaldo Jimenez
RHP, COLORADO

27-year-old is having an off year, but his strikeout ability is overpowering. Good fits? Yankees, Reds.

Heath Bell
RHP, SAN DIEGO

All-star is maybe the most proven closer available. Good fits? Rangers, Angels, Cardinals.

Hunter Pence
RF, HOUSTON

Hitting .307 with 11 HRs, 62 RBIs and 24 2Bs, for the lowly Astros. Good fits? Braves, Phillies.

B.J. Upton
CF, TAMPA BAY

2002's second overall pick has 15 HRs and 53 RBIs, with AVG of .227. Good fits? Nationals, Tigers.

Four impact players rumoured to be available going into Sunday's non-waiver deadline.

Past history has shown the Yankees have done everything they can to tweak the club to make it better."

Other teams in baseball's upper echelon like the Red Sox and Phillies will likely be active in the trade market.

Several other teams are in limbo. The Minnesota Twins are six games behind the Detroit Tigers in the AL Central. They have a history of late-season surges, but must make a decision soon if they are going to be buyers or sellers.

The Cleveland Indians are in a similar boat. The Indians trail the Tigers by just two games. They traded for outfield help Thursday. With outfielders Grady Sizemore and Shin-Soo Choo on the disabled list, the Indians added Cubs outfielder Kosuke Fukudome for a pair of minor-league players.

And what about the Cincinnati Reds? They're five games behind the Cardinals in the NL Central — and St. Louis just picked up right-hander Edwin Jackson, too — but some help in the rotation or the outfield could put them right back in the picture.

More big names find new NFL homes

There goes Albert Haynesworth, heading from Mike Shanahan's Redskins to Bill Belichick's Patriots — where he'll be joined by New England's other big pickup Thursday: Chad Ochocinco.

Reggie Bush? The Saints sent him to the Dolphins. And the Kevin Kolb saga ended the way pretty much everyone expected, with a trade from the Eagles to the Cardinals.

NFL clubs made a move a minute Thursday — and those big-name deals were only the beginning.

Day 3 of the compressed, post-lockout off-season also included more contract agreements and plenty of cuts, which teams were finally allowed to start announcing at 4:01 p.m. ET. Among the players getting released were Vince Young by the Titans, Nate Clements by the 49ers and Jake Delhomme by the Browns.

In the first dramatic example of how the new labour deal's rookie salary system will affect elite players, No. 2-overall draft pick Von Miller got $21 million US guaranteed over four years from the Denver Broncos. The No. 2 pick in 2010, Detroit Lions defensive lineman Ndamukong Suh signed a five-year deal worth $40 million guaranteed and as much as $68 million overall.

Broncos football chief John Elway tweeted, "We have agreed to terms with our 1st round pick, LB Von Miller. Can't wait to get him on the field."

The man widely regarded as the best available player in free agency, Nnamdi Asomugha, has yet to pick a team. But another top cornerback, Johnathan Joseph, agreed to terms with the Houston Texans, according to a person with knowledge of the deal, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the signing hadn't been announced.
